Scranton School District Releases Update on Northeast Intermediate

District expects to receive second round of testing reports by February 19

SCRANTON, PA — The Scranton School District has released the following statement regarding Northeast Intermediate environmental testing:

Per the Board of Education's request, the district has commissioned environmental consultant Cocciardi and Associates to review the results of the testing at Northeast Intermediate School, as well as to perform additional tests. We expect to have the results by Wednesday, February 19. At that point, Cocciardi and Associates will develop a scope of work and establish a timeline by which we can anticipate the return of students and staff to the building.

We do not yet know how long it will be until students and staff may resume classes at Northeast Intermediate School. In the meantime, students will continue to report to their designated temporary schools.

This is an incredibly difficult time for our entire school district community. We understand the concern our families are feeling about the challenges of having children move to a different school in the middle of the school year.

We are working around the clock to address this issue as quickly as we can. Before we allow students and staff to re-enter Northeast Intermediate, we must be completely sure the building provides a safe and healthy learning environment.

We will continue to update our community with more information as it becomes available.
